It's all about the journey, not the destination

ARE YOU "BIKER FRIENDLY"?

Bikers or motorcyclists are a fiercely loyal and close knit demographic. In the "9 to 5" world they may be an oil roughneck, an accountant or a federal judge, but once the motorcycle comes out of the garage and the riding gear is put on, they all become "bikers". They wave to each other as they pass on the highway; they're always ready to lend a helping hand, whether it be for a fellow rider broken down on the side of the road or raising money for one of the thousands of charities across the nation (when was the last time you saw a bunch of drivers in cars go on a Christmas toy run???) and they love to share their riding experiences, both good and bad.

And when bikers stop for the night they look for hotels / motels / campgrounds that they consider "biker friendly". What does that mean? First and foremost it is an establishment that welcomes bikers and secondly they offer a designated parking area that is well lighted and possibly even secure. Some places offer cleaning supplies to get the day's bug population off while others may give discounts on rooms or meals (One of the Biker Friendly places on my website even offers a free beer to wash down those bugs that missed your bike and caught your mouth).

Are you "biker friendly"?

Would you like to be?
